1831 the governor at Sydney issued a proclamation which had the effect of uppressing this scandalous traffic in what was little less than human lives. One may, by an easy sequence of events, as has been shown, trace the oust of Alexander till they find it stopping a bung-hole; but surely the most fruitful imagination, unless assisted, as in this instance, by truth, could pever possibly conceived anything so grewsomely grotesque as the idea of the head of some Illustrious New Zealand warrior of rore, who had in life refolced in some such awe-inspiring name as Matutaera Te Pukepuke Te Pane Tu Karato Te-a-Polatau Te Wherowhero Tawhias o-te-Ngatimabuta being, toward the middle century,

JAPANESE DIET.

It is a somewhat curious circumstance, says a London journal, that, at the very time when we are told that that characteristic Japanese flower, the chrysanthemum, is about to be introduced to public favor both in a hot and cold state of preparation, the Japanese have come to the conclusion which rice is dominant, is a menu which should more properly be dis-couraged than advocated for the food of the Japanese people. Sir Francis de Winton, addressing the Manchester Geographical society, has stated that instead of the vegetarian food to which
